The following sites are of special interest.

Http://www.renovare.org/ This is the home page of Richard Foster (Celebration of Discipline). Contains articles, resources and information on conferences. A good site for encouragement to go deeper in your spiritual walk.

Http://www.dare-connexions.org Asks the question, "Are you a spiritual person curious to know whether Jesus might have any validity for a new millenium?" A good site for both Believers and Seekers. Articles that use the questions of the culture to point to Jesus as the answer. An inspiration for creative talks with students. Eg: The Long Journey Home: a beginner's guide to the Christian Journey, The Gospel According to Robin Williams: Jesus' answer to Robin's questions, Does God Care? A Christian perspective on suffering and evil, etc.

Http://www.barna.org/ George Barna's home page. Billed as "Strategic Information You Can Trust." Articles on current trends, Research Archives, a search engine for previous data and recent new releases. A good place for both statistics and to observe where the church seems to be headed.

Http://www.boundless.org/ A great place to find articles that relate to college students. The goal of this site is to be a mentor to students and provide wisdom on "love beyond sex, a worldview beyond political correctness and faith beyond sociological stereotypes." Written by professors, students and professionals. Recent articles address "False Compassion" (about dating non-Christians) and how to witness in the class room. Highly recommended. Sponsored by Focus on the Family and very, very sharp. I encourage students to visit it weekly.

Http://www.dwillard.org/ What a wonderful idea! A site to become familiar with the Dallas Willard, Professor in the School of Philosophy at the University of Southern California. The site is modest about Dr. Willard but rich with articles he has written on both Christian and Philosophical topics. This is cutting edge spiritual and intellectual vigor.

Http://student.org/ Just a reminder that this is the place to get current information on The Baptist Campus Minister Network and wide ranging information on almost every Baptist Campus Ministry in the nation. This site is growing all the time.
